Call of paper

Call for papers: GIN2012, Linköping, Sweden, October 21–24, 2012

Leenard Baas, Anders Carlsson*

Environmental Technology and Management, Department of Management and Engineering (IEI), Linköping University, SE-581 83 Linköping, Sweden

The 18th conference of the Greening of Industry Network will be organized in Linköping in the county of Östergötland, Sweden. The conference is scheduled for October 21–24, 2012. As usual, GIN2012 will combine plenary sessions and workshop presentations/dialogues with information and knowledge sharing among stakeholders in the county of Östergötland and the conference participants. This region is known for its “Triple Helix” basis for innovative SMEs and bio-fuel production synergies. Sweden is strongly focused on clean technology innovation processes and the application of renewable energy.

The title of the GIN 2012 conference is: “Support your future today! Turning environmental challenges into business opportunities”, which reflects the “Triple Helix” approach. The themes of the GIN2012 conference will challenge the participants to share knowledge in dynamic dialogues about innovative industry scenarios. The first Call for Papers was launched on the December 10, 2011. GIN2012 will mark the start of the third decade of the network. Be sure to be present at this special occasion!

Please visit the Conference website www.GIN2012.se for further information and submission of your abstracts.

Special GIN2012 issue of Journal of Cleaner Production.

Authors of ‘to be selected’ papers will be invited to submit their peer-review ready documents for potential publication in a special issue of Journal of Cleaner Production.

Details of themes and guidelines for the JCLP GIN2012 special issue will be provided at www.GIN2012.se and in JCLP in a Call for Papers that will be published in early 2012.
